Carsten is a pioneer in the field of social and environmental investing, as the founder of a global mutual fund committed to investing in companies incorporating environmental strategies into their business practices. Carsten drives on biodiesel and helped create Portfolio 21's award winning carbon mitigation program. He is also a founding director of Upstream 21, helping to keep local companies local, and his nonprofit, Community Friends, a microfinance fund in Sri Lanka. His work has been recognized by the United Nations Environment Programme. Carsten is a graduate of Stichting Nijenrode, The Netherlands School of Business and the University of Puget Sound.

He has served on the national board of directors of The Social Investment Forum, 1000 Friends of Oregon Foundation; The United Nation's Eco4TheWorld; The Sustainable Investment Institute, ARABLE: the Association for Rural Agriculture Building the Local Economy; the Ecotrust Council; the City of Portland Sustainable Industries Committee; the financial advisory Committee of NCAP: Northwest Coalition for Alternatives to Pesticides; and the development committee of the McKenzie River Gathering Foundation. Carsten testified for Oregon's Anti-Apartheid Bill which passed in 1987 and worked on tobacco divestment legislation.

Portfolio 21 invests in companies designing ecologically superior products, using renewable energy, and developing efficient production methods. Companies held in the fund seek to prosper in the 21st Century by recognizing environmental sustainability as a fundamental human challenge and a tremendous business opportunity.

In his presentation Carsten will discuss his role of managing risks and returns, and his insights behind the investment opportunities presented by the growing ecological crisis being driven by overconsumption and the increasing environmental degradation.

“We now use the planet’s resources faster than they can regenerate. We are able to keep growing and consuming because we are liquidating ecological capital rather than living off annual yields.”
- Carsten Henningsen
